Yank Finds His Mother In Town at Czech Line

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN GERMANY. — An American sergeant's reunion with his mother brought tears to the eyes of everybody in the little Czech border town of Barnau.

Maj. Dan Riddle of Marksville, La., had to go to Barnau with a captain and his driver. "May I go along?" asked Sgt. Harry Alden of Ithaca, N. Y. "My family used to have a summer home there." As they rode toward Barnau the sergeant told of his birth in Nuremburg of German-Jewish parents and how he came to the United States in 1938, became a citizen, and joined the army.

"There it is! There is my house," the sergeant shouted as they neared the town. He leaped from the jeep and pounded on the front door. His grandmother came to the door. She told him his mother had left town helping the American troops, so Alden and his friends drove on.

Major Riddle saw two women—one tall and stately—walking down the street, and on impulse he stopped the jeep.

The tall woman was Harry's mother and when she saw him she cried out "Hans! My boy!" and came running with open arms. That was when the crying started.

Japanese Female Sniper Is Captured by Marines

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The capture of what was claimed to be the only Japanese female sniper of the war to date was disclosed by Lt. Comdr. Robert C. Downes, damage control officer of the aircraft carrier Franklin.

He told a fund rally that the prisoner, whom he described as 29 and attractive, was taken by marines about a year ago in the Marshalls.

2,657 Accused Of War Crimes

United Nations Prepared to Prosecute and Punish Guilty to Limit.

LONDON. — Lord Wright told the United Nations war crimes commission that 2,657 individuals had been charged with war crimes by various Allied nations and the commission itself, as reported by the Associated Press.

"The time has now come when the mere collection of material must change over into action," said the Australian chairman of the conference, representing the United States and 15 other nations. "Action here means the trial of criminals and their conviction, sentence and punishment where appropriate."

Of those charged with war crimes, 2,524 are Germans, 110 Italians, 17 Bulgarians, 2 Hungarians, 2 Albanians and 2 Romanians. None of the names were given.

Germans in key positions listed the war crimes commission on a general charge of "systematic terrorism" total 561. Lord Wright discussed also that the war crimes commission on its own initiative "in respect of specific crimes" had put the names of three Germans on the list.

French Accuse 1,126.

France preferred more charges than any other nation, accusing 1,116 Germans and 10 Italians. Poland named 544 Germans and several groups of an unknown number of persons. Britain filed charges against 127 Germans, 27 Italians and two Romanians.

A total of 454 additional suspects and witnesses have also been listed by the governments of Australia, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France Norway and Yugoslavia. The Australians in addition preferred charges against 93 Japanese, among others.

From the various lists, Lord Wright said, the investigating committee has passed approximately 800 names of Germans for publication in the next list of war criminals, along with 185 more as suspects.

"Justice to be effective must be expeditious," he said. "Any avoidable delay is certainly mischievous and may be fatal to the attainment of the object which is sought, that is, the punishment of the criminals for the double purpose of retribution to satisfy the peoples' demands for justice and of warning and example to deter such crimes in the future."

Called General Scheme.

Lord Wright said that one special feature of Nazi or Fascist crimes was that they were not merely perpetrated on an unprecedented scale over the whole range of military operations at every occupation, but that "they exhibit every trace of a general scheme."

"They all clearly emanate from a master criminal and his entourage and are carried out according to plan by elaborate, organized agencies and instrumentalities," he said, "that is, by machinery under common direction and by common concert."

He said the function of the commission was to acquire evidence and to trace crimes from actual perpetrators to "the central mind or authority such as Hitler or Goering, right through the intermediate agencies . . . and to analyze the [illegible]

Americans in Manila Receive Basic Ration

MANILA, P. I. — The American consulate assumed the task of supplying foodstuffs to American civilians in Manila recently, and announced a basic ration of 2,000 calories daily, costing $1.85 a week for each adult.

The ration includes beef and gravy, C ration biscuits and pilchards.

Military demands on shipping still limit food import, and a black market flourishes. Typical current black market prices include: Beef, $4 a pound; bread, $1.50 a loaf, sweet potatoes, 35 cents a pound, and bananas, 8 cents each.

1,500 Children From Britain Still in U. S.

LONDON.—About 1,500 British children evacuated because of wartime air raids still are in the United States, and some don't want to come back, Education Minister Richard K. Law told commons. He said that more than 2,000 have returned and that all the rest could do so without difficulty if they were willing.

600,000 Nazis To Toil for U. S.

Of 2,852,000 Prisoners Held By Our Armies, 200,000 Will Go to France.

PARIS. — United States armies, which held 2,852,000 German prisoners in Europe when victory came, will keep 600,000 of them as laborers, Col. Robert J. Gill told the Associated Press.

From 200,000 to 225,000 more American-held prisoners will be assigned to France for labor in this country, said Col. Gill, chief of the prisoner-of-war division in the European theater provost marshal's office.

With nearly 500,000 prisoners in the United States and 25,000 more in Great Britain, Colonel Gill estimated it would take at least nine months to cut the total figure to 600,000 by various means, some of which still have not yet been decided upon.

He reiterated previous statements of high American military authorities that German prisoners would be "permitted" to remove land mines, but declined further comment on that subject.

He emphasized, however, that all plans for employment of prisoners in the rehabilitation of battered Europe were based on rules of the Geneva convention, despite the fact that the German government —which was a signatory of the convention—had ceased to exist.

To Free Some Captives.

About 160,000 Germans now held by Americans in three prison camps north of Cologne will be turned over to the British when occupation zones are definitely established, Colonel Gill said.

The captives to be turned over to France now are held in seven enclosures in France, he said, adding that they will come under control of the grade of the French just as if French armies had captured them.

He also disclosed that about 18 per cent of the total bag of prisoners would be discharged and sent home under a plan to turn loose all miners, farmers, transport workers, women prisoners and men over 50 years of age who were not suspected of war crimes. These discharges already are under way and probably will reach 300,000 in a short time, he said.

SS Troops, none of which are being discharged, are being held for investigation as war criminals and segregated along with other suspects, Colonel Gill said.

He added that large numbers of foreign soldiers, mostly Russians, who had been impressed into the German army, had created a problem originally, but that all of them except the Russians had been returned to the control of the armies of their own countries.

Prisoners Cut Our Costs.

The Russians at first were not interested in their own nationals who had been taken into the German army, but they recently changed their policy, he said, disclosing that around 50,000 Russians from the Wehrmacht had been returned to Soviet control and repatriation of more than 20,000 others was under way.

But he pointed out that prisoners —more than 300,000 of whom were laboring for the Americans prior to V-E Day—had saved millions of dollars, millions of man-hours and released thousands of American troops for combat duty.

German enlisted men working as prisoners of war are paid at the rate of 80 cents a day, but will get none of it in cash until Germany foots the bill, a supreme headquarters spokesman explained recently.

The rate for officers: Lieutenants, $20 a month; captains, $30; from majors up to field marshals, $40, all in addition to an allowance of slightly more than the enlisted man's 10 cents a day.

Emergency camps were set up as captures increased, and the war department was persuaded to take 150,000 more, but only 140,000 of them had been shipped when Germany surrendered.

Over-Age Warships Prove Their Worth

Helped to Bridge Gap When Things Looked Black.

LONDON. — Nine of the 50 overage destroyers traded by the United States to England in 1940 have been lost in action, but the remaining 41 still are in active service after establishing themselves as outstanding fighting ships through nearly five years of war.

Although already pensioned off when Germany declared war, the ships proved their seaworthiness in battle and helped bridge the gap when things looked blackest for Britain.

They have been in commando raids, guarded convoys against dive bombers on the perilous Murmansk run, escorted troops across the channel on D-Day and assisted in the hunting down and the sinking of nearly a dozen submarines in the storm-swept North Atlantic.

Nine of them have been loaned to Russia, seven were last reported in use by the Royal Canadian navy and the rest are prowling around somewhere in the Atlantic or in British home waters or on convoy in coastal patrol jobs.

The first of the group to be sunk was the U. S. S. Welles, renamed H.M.S. Cameron, which caught a Nazi torpedo on January 1, 1940, on one of its first missions.

The last victim was the U.S.S. Swasey, renamed H.M.S. Rockingham, which went down in the Atlantic on September 27, 1944.

One of the 50, the U.S.S. Buchanan, renamed the H.M.S. Cambelton, was sacrificed deliberately as a block ship in the daring British commando raid on St. Nazaire in 1942.

With her bow specially stiffened and filled with five tons of delayed action high explosive, the Cambelton ploughed her way through the double torpedo baffle protecting the entrance to the harbor locks and rammed the center of the main gates. As soon as the bows were firmly wedged in, special troops landed as arranged and set about the work of demolition.

A few minutes later the whole destroyer blew up, taking a big part of the St. Nazaire harbor works with it.

Over 300 killed on Virginia highways thus far in 1945.

Report Germans Starved Babies of Slave Women

IN GERMANY. — Evidence was found that the Nazis starved to death the new-born babies of Russian and Polish women slave laborers in the Reich.

In the factory town of Fallerleben, American army medical men found German records and got testimony from local residents showing that in that area alone 350 infants died in a nursery that was really operated as a house of death.

The children, taken from their mothers a few days after birth, were left unattended until they died, the evidence showed. Their bodies were then tied in bundles and wrapped in paper, and handed over to a German farmer who got 25 cents a piece for burying their mass graves.

MARTIN - MARTIN

Martin, of Oakville and Beverly Ellington Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Martin, of Gladstone.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W.A. Clark.

The wedding music was played by Warren Martin. Mr. John C. Caldwell sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because," and a Benediction Chorus, accompanied by Mrs. James Conner.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in white satin,fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves pointed over the hand, fitted bodice, and the fullness of the gathered skirt formed a long train. Her long veil of illusion fell from a tiera of the same material, combined with pearlized orange blossoms.

She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Maurice Williams was her sister's matron of honor. Her gown was fashioned in identical lines with that of the bride, wearing a minueture veil. Her gown was pale blue net over taffeta. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Forty-four soldiers died of poison liquor in one week of May. The overall figure for the year outstripped the number of deaths by communicable diseases among troops on the continent in the same period.

B-29 Bomber Blows Off L'd, Then Catches It

GUAM.—Joe B-29ers have brought back a souvenir from a town of the Jap homeland—inadvertently.

It's a large piece of tin roofing, snagged on the wing of a superfort piloted by Capt. Samuel B. Hanford, Saybrook, Conn., over Sakai, a suburb of Osaka. The crew ripped it to bits to provide souvenirs for all.

The 20th air force explained the bomber entered the intensely hot updraft from the flaming target just in time to catch the soaring roofing on a wing.
